

HumanProgress

PRESENTED BY MARIAN TUPY

THE MYTH OF OVERPOPULATION

People have worried about overpopulation for centuries.

We do, after all, live on a planet with a finite number of atoms. At the pace the population has grown over the past two hundred years, resource shortages seemed inevitable.

However, the overpopulation alarmists, from Thomas Malthus to Paul Ehrlich, have all been wrong. Doomsday dates passed, and resources became ever more abundant.

What did all these experts miss?

Find out in this recent video produced by PragerU.

Facebook

Twitter

Instagram

YouTube

Email